The Edo-Tokyo Museum opened its doors on March 28, 1993, as a space to reflect on the history and culture of Edo-Tokyo and to envision the city and life in the future. Thirty years have passed, and now we are undergoing a major renovation, for which reason we will be closed until sometime in FY2025 (scheduled). However, we are pleased to announce that we will be holding an exhibition to showcase some of our permanent collections at the Tokyo Metropolitan Art Museum in Ueno.

The exhibition will present a part of our permanent exhibitions such as the "Rickshaw," and other related materials. There will also be a special exhibition which introduces the history of Ueno.

We hope these exhibitions will provide an opportunity to experience the charm of the Edo-Tokyo Museum, as well as the history and culture of Edo-Tokyo, through a wide range of our collections.

Special Exhibition Tour of "Ueno Hill"

In this special exhibition, we introduce the scenery and history of Ueno through nishiki-e (colored woodblock prints) and postcards from the Edo-Tokyo Museum collections. We hope you enjoy seeing how things have changed, comparing to the present day.
